Would Not Be Worthless.

Both Dr. Byers and Dr. Harrison E. Howe, editor of the Journal of Industrial and Engineering Chemistry, differed from statements of Professor Fisher, who has gone to Germany to study the synthetic method of gold achievement, that synthetic gold might be worthless.

"If one should succeed in what seems now to be an improbable performance, the product would be far from worthless," said Dr. Howe. "For we know it might be more valuable. Moissan, of Paris, demonstrated it was possible to make diamonds, but the small ones which he did make were more costly than the genuine gems."

SYNOPSIS
Thrown out of a job in his father's livery stable because of failure, George Morton becomes a wanderer for Old Princeton, rich and arrogant. The youth falls in love with Sylvia Platter, and when she falls from her horse, he kisses her. This brings on a fight. Morton leaves, goes to Princeton and determines on a college education. He makes the football team, studies with intense devotion and the aid of a tutor, George Bally.

That, to an extent, broke down his severity. He couldn't quarrel from him. Sylvia Platter could have heard him say that!

"Let the others think they've done us a good turn," he went on. "We have to live in the same class without clashing each other's faces every time we meet, but you can't pull the wool over my eyes, and I won't try to pull it over yours. Now get out, and don't come here alone again!"

He felt better and cleaner. After this, when Dalrymple had gone he finished his chapter and tumbled into bed.

XVIII
George was glad of the laundry. Indeed, on the holidays approaching, it seemed to him a sound excuse for not dashing joyously from Princeton with the rest, but it didn't cure the depression with which he saw the college empty. He wandered about the campus as desolate as a city swept by pestilence, asking himself what he would have done if his father and mother hadn't expelled him. As old Princeton had no more to him, he thought about that; it wasn't even a question. He took long walks or stayed in his room, reading and once or twice answering neglected letters. He had spent from encounter to encounter at Betty's party. It was nice to have them, but of course he couldn't go to such affairs alone just yet. Besides, he didn't have the money. He said his stairs one day, scolding him for sulking in his tent.

"I only heard last night that you were in town. I'm not rich. Why haven't you been around?"

"I didn't want to bother—"

"Bully interrupted him. 'I'm afraid I didn't appreciate you went quite so much alone.' George said, 'I stayed alone.' George said, 'But I don't want anybody to feel sorry for me because of that. It has some advantages.'"

"You're too young to say such things," Bully said.

So George went to the Dickinson Street house for Christmas dinner. There was no other guest. The rooms were bright with holly, and a very small but cozy fire burned in the grate. Mrs. Bully, as he entered, touched his cheek with her lips and welcomed him by his first name. She greeted for him an illusion of a mother, a true friend. She made him feel as if he had come home.

"And," he thought, "Squibs and she know."

He wondered if it was that knowledge that made Squibs go into his social views one evening when he sat with him in the study. It was then that George realized he had no such views apart from his own class. Vaguely he knew that somewhere outside of Princeton strikes multiplied these days, that poor people complained of the cost of food and housing, that communistic propaganda was talked with an increasing freedom, that now and then a bomb burst, destroying more often than the people it was designed to help. He saw that Squibs sought to lead, as he himself, and gave a close attention while the tutor elaborated his slight knowledge of the growing unrest.

"But it's all so far away, sir," he said. "I've so much more of interest to me to bother about right here."

Bully relighted his pipe.

"The happy, limited vision of youth," he sighed. "You'll be through your A. B. before you know it. And you'll have to face such big issues without any forethought!"

He smoked a few moments, then commenced to speak doubtfully.

"And in another sense it isn't so far away as you think. It all goes on in plain sight, right here in undergraduate Princeton. The views a man takes away from college should be applicable to the conditions he meets out, sir."

"I don't see quite what you mean, sir."

"Why was Bully going at it so carefully?"

"I mean," Bully said, "that you have your own mind. You're not a puppet, and your lord of the land. I mean there is no real community of interest here. I mean you've made friends because you're bigger and better looking than most, and because you're a demon. You haven't made many friends simply because you are poor and earnest. And the poor students suffer from the cost of things, and the rich men don't know and don't care. And the poor men, and the men without family or a good school behind them, who haven't football or some outstanding usefulness, are as submerged as the wretches in the gutter. The man who lives in Fifth Avenue or Park Lane, and the men who can't get in the clubs, because of poverty or lack of prominence, remind me of the ragged ones who cling to the railings, peering through at plenty with evil in their hearts."

"You're advocating communism, sir?"

Bully shook his head.

"I'm advocating nothing. I'm trying to find out what you advocate."

"I can't help feeling," George said, "that a man has to look after himself."

"And as he waited home he confessed freely in his own mind: 'I'm advocating George Morton. How can squibs expect me to bother with any one else when I have so far to go?'"

True Detective Stories

IROQUOIS MURDER

There are many who have ridiculed the methods by which Craig Kennedy, Sherlock Holmes and other master sleuths of fiction have analyzed their infinitely complex conclusions by deductive reasoning or by mechanical apparatus which registered every fraction of a heartbeat or every minute change in the suspect's respiration.

But even now and then these same methods are used by detectives in real life, frequently with a great degree of success.

For example, there was the Hotel Iroquois murder case in which Police Commissioner Dougherty of New York applied a mixture of the Holmes and Kennedy rules in such a manner as to make the guilty man practically convict himself, although at the time he was ignorant of the fact that he was doing it.

William Jackson, a wealthy guest at the hotel, was found dead in his room one morning, stabbed through the heart. His gold watch and several other pieces of jewelry had not been taken from the room. In his pockets were three 25-cent pieces in one of the vest pockets. As Jackson was known to have carried a good deal of money, the supposed murderer of the man was naturally someone who had either lost his nerve or who feared to take the watch and jewelry because they could be too easily traced.

Commissioner Dougherty's knowledge of the workings of the criminal mind could find little that could be dignified by the term "clue." Jackson had evidently returned to his room after the night before.

In fact one of the clerks recalled seeing him enter shortly after midnight, but the elevator boy said that he had come up alone, and that he had come up one or two floors from the same floor for several hours afterwards.

"That means nothing," Dougherty said after a careful examination of the room and the body of the murdered man. Dougherty returned to his office and contented himself with seeing that the murderer of the man was not a murderer at all.

As days passed without further developments, the public began to criticize the case and to "let it go."

Finally, when the wave of criticism had reached a height that he could no longer afford to overlook it, Commissioner Dougherty decided to try a different method. He called for a shot in the dark—and a hundred-to-one shot at that.

"All we've been able to find out," he said to one of his lieutenants, "is that Jackson was killed by a left-handed man, standing behind him and slightly to one side of him. Jackson dropped without a sound and the murderer withdrew without a sound. The whole thing probably didn't take more than 30 seconds. Now, excluding the guests at the hotel at the time Jackson was killed, it's manifestly impossible to reach a man who is round up every person who was in the Iroquois that night. Find out which ones are left-handed, and bring 'em down here and let 'em talk to 'em."

"Third degree, chief?"

"No!" snorted the commissioner. That wouldn't do in this case. At least one of the left-handed men would be coming to try something new. It's a gamble, but we've got to take a chance."

One by one the left-handed brigade was marched into Dougherty's office. One by one he put to them a set of questions, one of the first of which regarded their health and the state of their pulse. Once he had his finger on the suspect's wrist, he never lifted it until the final question had been asked and answered.

It was not until the commissioner commenced to question Gold, the elevator boy who had taken Jackson up to his floor the night that he was murdered, that he noted any material change in the pulse beats of the person he was examining. When he asked Gold what he had done immediately after Jackson had stepped out of his car, the boy's pulse raced, and then commenced to race.

But his voice was quiet enough as he replied that Jackson had asked him for some tea water, and that he had brought it, placed it outside his door, and gone on to his room.

"Instantly," thought Gold, "Dougherty's mind—Jackson, opened the door, produced a roll of bills, asked for change for a dollar, and then Gold, a quarter, silvering the other three into his vest pocket. Gold, seeing the money, murdered Jackson either then or later. At least he knows something about the crime. His pulse is proof of that."

The commissioner only said: "You're left-handed, aren't you?"

"No, sir," replied Gold, promptly. "I'm right-handed." And again his pulse was racing.

"That'll do," Dougherty concluded. "Thank you for coming here."

The instant the boy left the commissioner ordered him followed. Two days later he was arrested and finally convicted—one of the few cases on record where a man's inability to control his heart-action during the strain of lying, provided the initial indication of his guilt.

Dinner Stories

Liza belonged to a large family. Even on the plantation, where large families were the rule, the number of her brothers and sisters was a big number. One day, when Liza appeared at the "Big House," where she was trusted with the daily churning, with the information that the family circle had been still further enlarged.

"We've got a new baby to our house," she announced.

"Have you really?" exclaimed her mistress, "Boy or girl?"

"Well, well, another girl! Have they named her yet?"

"Yes'm," replied the small darkey. "She name Frances. Mammy say she didn't have none name 'Frances'."

"Abroad," said Lady Marlowe Cavenish at a dinner in Newport. "Celery is never eaten raw. I serve raw celery. However, when I entertain American guests."

"At my shooting-box in Donegal I served raw celery one November evening to some Americans. My butler's assistant, a country lad, asked at the Americans eating the celery, and finally I heard him whisper to the butler behind his hand:

"That look at the 'blaguard's all the flowers.'"

"Tinker Bob" Stories

by Carlyle H. Holcomb

THE MEETING OF MR. MARSH RABBIT

Right behind the King of the forest, there was the movement of a twig that no one noticed but Jack, the rabbit. Jack always noticed all such movements.

"You see," said Tinker Bob, "there is a difference in the tracks that are beside the brook and the ones that lead into the brook. Look very, carefully."

One was a creature that climbs a tree, the other one that always stays on the ground. The creature that climbs a tree always makes a track on the ground showing his forefoot together. So this track was made by Johnny Sprigle for he has foot nearly as large as Jack, the rabbit.

"You see, Mr. Monkey, you don't know everything yet," said Jack, the wood rat. "I can even teach you some lessons about the forest."

"Yes, you, but you haven't told me who made the tracks that lead into the brook. I guess you don't know any more about it than I do."

"First will have to tell the wood rat and the tracks that lead into the brook," said Tinker Bob. "Don't you know there are other kinds of rabbits besides Jack, the cottontail rabbit? Well, if you don't know I will tell you. There is a rabbit that looks just like Jack but he acts differently, and he grows larger."

"Oh, King, I'm afraid you are trying to fool me. I never saw another rabbit in all the forest."

"Well, Mr. Monkey, the King is not fooling you, I am telling you the truth. This fellow lives in the swamp all the time and he swims as well as runs. He doesn't go away very far from the water. He can swim as well as 'Three-legs, the Muskrat.'"

Presently a movement became noticeable behind the King and there came into full view the sleek little fellow the King was talking about. Very much like Jack, the cottontail, and Jack, the cottontail, is that he has a white spot on the underside of his tail and he is a little heavier. Other than that he is very much like Jack. He prefers to live in the swamp all the time for it is easier to find protection there, without running so far away, and anyway he does not like the brief patch.

"You see, Mr. Monkey, there are others in the forest who know more than you do," Jack, the wood rat, spoke again.

Jack, the wood rat, spoke again. "I'm sorry, Mr. Marsh Rabbit, whom he learned to respect quite as much as he did Jack, the Cottontail."

Stubby's eyes were only partly closed, so when he saw Billy wallowing in the mud, he too jumped in and did the same.

But where was Button all this time? It would be easier to tell where he was not, or had not been. For of course, he too, got stuck when he came running to Billy's rescue. At first when he saw the black swine coming after him he tried to dodge them, but he tried jumping at them and biting them, but this did not do. The angry boys were not to be frightened by any such maneuvers, and they settled on his back in clusters and stung him so he was wild.

Then one stung him on the tender part of the nose, and another in his ear which made the pain unbearable and he ran up one side of a tree and down the other; across the alfalfa fields; rolled in the grass; squeezed through the garden fence; rubbed up against the cabbage, trying to rub the bees off, for some were still sticking in his fur. Then down the lane he ran to the house with his back arched like a hoop and his long tail swished out to twice its natural size.

On, on he went, until he arrived at the kitchen. Through the door he went, nearly upsetting the Chinaman who was carrying a large pan of tomatoes. These he spilled when he slipped over the cat and they rolled in all directions.

"Oh, Oh, Oh!" exclaimed the Chinaman, holding his sides with laughter. "You are visit Mr. Day, and he kiss you, one, two, three, too many times. What for you go so near? Come with me and I clean you up."

The Chinaman cut two pieces of rope from his clothes, tied a piece around each of their necks and tail

The Chinaman gave one look and then he went over to the door in a fit of laughter. For Billy Jr. looked too comical for words with his cheeks swollen out as though he had plumped in them, and with one leg-sided and the other, the Chinaman, with his eyes were both nearly closed by his swollen cheeks which looked like unpeeled turnips. There they stood, like two traps, asking for sympathy and bread.

"Oh, Oh, Oh!" exclaimed the Chinaman, holding his sides with laughter. "You are visit Mr. Day, and he kiss you, one, two, three, too many times. What for you go so near? Come with me and I clean you up."

McAngus would come in with an aged, scarred disfigure, and a well-worn hat and keep the door, stooping above the place in back-breaking discomfort.

"I should think you would find it easier to use a broom," the professor ventured one morning.

"Kiddo, no doo," agreed Mrs. MacAngus. "I use the brush and I have not the broom, my mother having left the broom to the eldest child. The youngest broom got nothing but a turkey wing."

A NON-FATTENING DINNER

Last week I was rather discouraged about the fattening effects of the usual Christmas dinner. It's a splendid sort of meal for the woman who wants to gain flesh, but it's hopeless for the one who is trying to reduce. So here are a few suggestions for a Christmas dinner that the fat woman can eat without feeling that she is adding too much to her weight.

The first of all I must answer a criticism that I know all my steady friends are going to hurl at me. They are all going to say "Christmas comes only once a year, we certainly might be allowed to go as we choose and eat what we please, just once!" The only trouble with that is that they will work for a week taking off the flesh caused by one day's indulgence. I don't think that pays but after all it's a matter of one's personal opinion. But here is a Christmas dinner which really won't be fattening and which does not sacrifice too many of the gastronomical pleasures of the holidays.

Grapefruit: Delicious to start a meal and not fattening, if you don't eat sugar with it. Oysters: practically no caloric value, unless you cover them with cocktail sauce. This

Heart and Home Problems

Letters May be Addressed to Mrs. Thompson, in Care of the Gazette.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl of 17 and am going with a fellow of 19. We have been going steady for five months. I don't know whether he loves me, but I love him more than I do not think he knows it. He is a very nice fellow in his manners, but he drank quite a bit the first two months, but he does not drink any more. Do you think he stopped for my sake?

The last time I saw him was about a week ago and I will not see him again for a while. I told him I would see him in why did I do this? Please tell me if I should tell him to come as always? STUBBORN.

You seem to think I have psychic powers. It is impossible to say whether I do or not. I have stopped drinking for my sake or because drinks are so hard to get.

Probably something contrary in your nature wanted to test him and see whether he would do it for you. He has much spirit he will do as you say and stay away.

My advice is to let this matter drop and not seek the young man in the future be more careful and when you care for some one do not tell him to stay away.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: For some time I have been going with a girl and very often she has invited me to have supper on Sunday night. I like this girl very much, but I am not sure how well she likes me because she goes with other young men, too.

I don't know just what to do about Christmas. I can't think of anything to give her and as long as she has other friends too I wonder if I should.

Billy and Stubby wondered what he was going to do next, so stood still and watched him as best they could out of their own eyes. (In the next story you'll hear what happened.)

What would you advise me to do in this matter? TOMMIE T.

Since you like the girl very much I would advise you to send her more for Christmas than a card. You will gain favor in her eyes if you send flowers. If, however, you cannot afford flowers, present her with a nice box of candy.

"Mrs. A. A.": Clean the silk in gasoline. Do not try to wash it.

Listen, World!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

We make such a fuss about life after death! We're always searching for signs and mysteries, always bombarding the Almighty with prayers and remonstrances concerning that far-off land of the north. But have little most of us concern ourselves with life before death!

You deny it? You think we are all men too much concerned with life before death? Oh, no, we're not! We're concerned with eating and drinking, with playing and planning, with mating and melling—but we're very much concerned with life before death. We're tremendously interested in the adventures of the spirit when once it is freed from the body, but how much more interested do we do with the spirit while it remains in the body! We're tremendously interested in the fact that we may lose our personalities when we've crossed the Styx, but how many of us try to achieve personalities while we're camping here beside the Hudson or the Mississippi or the San Joaquin?

"Adventures"—personalities!—pooh! We don't know what they mean. We follow beaten paths that aren't a bit more daring than cow trails for the most part. We're mortally afraid to try anything that's different or dangerous. We insist on thinking as the crowd thinks—and if the crowd hasn't registered an opinion, we refuse to think at all. An ordinarily active person, has it all, except most of us for initiative and vision. If we do wake up on the other side, I'll bet that the average human will want to know where's the nearest cafeteria and what are the divorce laws.

Why, if the Almighty did wake us up on Resurrection Day and then us Vital Programs calling for courage, humor and originality, we'd do life before death!

WOMEN RESPONSIBLE

In the Same Position as Husbands on Financial Matters

(By Associated Press.)
Madison, Wis.—Married women in Wisconsin now bear the same financial responsibility as their husbands, without claim to legal disability on the grounds of sex. W. Gilman, assistant attorney general, advised Marshall Cousins, banking commissioner, in an opinion today, enactment of the equal rights law by the 1921 legislature, extending full legal and political equality to women, is given as the reason for the changed situation.

This opinion of Mr. Gilman is the first given in interpreting the equal rights law, passed during the closing days of the last session of the legislature. Up to the present, few changes have been made concerning its effect. Other than in jury service where women have recently been selected on a parity with men.

Little on a Note.
Mr. Cousins, in his request for an opinion from the attorney general, asked "whether under the new statute a married woman is liable upon a note signed by her as surety, joint maker or endorser."

"Cousins have held that such a contract is not binding upon a married woman unless the proceeds were for the benefit of her separate estate."

"Whether such a rule of law is to be considered a disability or a privilege or protection is the important question," he said. "In his former rulings our court has treated this as a disability or a lack of freedom of contract on the part of a married woman."

"If that is a proper construction, such disability has been removed by the chapter of the statutes in question. I believe that is as the court would construe it."

The new statute has not been construed.

PUP PEDDLES DOPE ON BROADWAY; WOMAN PATRON IS CAUGHT

New York.—A poodle dog, Felix by name and a drug-carrier by trade, has pranced down Broadway with his last cargo of narcotics, the police say.

Felix, who answered a call of a well dressed young woman just as Ralph Oliver, an alleged addict, approached, was closely watched as he placed his paws against her skirts and stretched his neck upward.

strued by any of our courts, so far as I am aware, and it is not entirely certain how this provision would be construed, but it is my opinion that a married woman is bound by such a contract on her part."

Under provisions of the new law, the first of its kind to be enacted in the country, women are given full rights with men in the exercise of suffrage, freedom of contract, choice of residence for voting, jury service, holding office and in all other legal and political matters.

There is now a national movement to have a law similar to that in effect in Wisconsin, enacted by the federal congress and in other states.

ONLY FEW DEMANDS FOR CASH BONUS NOW BEING MADE

(By Associated Press.)
Madison, Wis.—Payments on applications for soldiers cash bonus, which were made in large numbers to the state for two years after the war, have dwindled until only a scattering few now come into the state reception board.

During November payments totaling $43,178 were made, with $45,538 during October, $34,498 in September and $139,051 in August. The amount disbursed from the fund which now amounts to $360,000, will be even less during December, according to estimates.

A total of over $2,000,000 has been paid to ex-soldiers of the world war by the state through its cash bonus. The legislature has provided that $1,350,000 from this fund shall go to the university of Wisconsin in a general hospital in conjunction with the proposed four year medical course.

This amount at present is not available for the fund but Governor Blaine hopes that special investigations of income tax returns being made by the tax commission will result in the amount being paid to the fund for the university.

Just as the bear was about to bring the piece of iron pipe down on the bear's nose and ran toward the boiler house.

The bear got close enough to bring the claws down Sherwin's back, but another blow from the iron pipe saved him, the bear running for the bush as Sherwin lay exhausted at the boiler house door.

YOUR INCOME TAX

Here will be printed latest information about forms, rulings, regulations, and what is necessary under new Federal Tax Law.

The following statement is issued by Collector of Internal Revenue, A. J. Wilkins, District of Wisconsin, for release Sunday, December 27, 1931.

With the approach of the period for filing income tax returns—January 10 to March 15, 1932—unpayers are advised to take no time in the compilation of their accounts for the year 1931. A new and important provision of the Revenue Act of 1931 is that every person whose gross income for the year 1931 was $5,000 or over shall file a return, regardless of the amount of net income upon which the tax is assessed.

Returns are required of every single person whose net income was $1,000 or over and every married person living with his or her spouse. If the net income was $2,000 or over, widows and widowers and persons separated or divorced from husband or wife, are regarded as single persons.

Net income is gross income, less certain deductions for business expenses, losses, taxes, etc. Gross income includes practically all income received by the taxpayer during the year in the case of the wage earner, salaries, wages, bonuses, and commissions; in the case of professional services; in the case of farmers all profits from the sale of farm products; and rental or sale of land.

In the making of an income tax return for the year 1931, every taxpayer should present to himself the following questions:

What were your profits from your business, trade, profession, or vocation?

Did you receive any interest on bank deposits?

Have you any property from which you received any income in the form of dividends or interest from stocks or bonds?

Did you receive any bonuses during the year?

Did you make any profit on the sale of stocks, bonds, or other property, real or personal?

Did you act as a broker in any transaction, in which you received commissions?

Are you interested in any partnership or other firm from which you received any income?

Have you received income from royalties or patents?

Have you any minor children who are working?

Do you appropriate, or have the right to appropriate, the earnings of such children? If so, the amount must be included in the return of income.

Has your wife any income from any source whatsoever? If so, it must be included in your return of income, in a separate return of income.

Did you receive any directors' fees or trustees' fees in the course of the year?

Do you hold any office in a bona fide society from which you receive income?

Answers to all of these questions are necessary to determine whether a person has an income sufficiently large to require that a return be filed, and may be the means of avoiding the heavy penalties imposed for failure to do so within the time prescribed.

Every manufacturer of cereal beverages of unfermented fruit juices or imitations thereof, of still drinks, of natural or artificial mineral waters or table waters, or imitations thereof, of carbonated gas used or sold for use in the production of carbonated beverages, of carbonated beverages made with concentrates, essences, or extracts of carbonated beverages made by the use of finished or fountain syrups manufactured by such manufacturer, and every person conducting a fountain, ice cream parlor, or other similar place of business who manufactures any syrups or the kind mentioned in section 602 (e), shall, within 10 days after commencing business, and thereafter on or before July 1 of each year, make application for registry to the collector in whose district his place of business is located.

Each person required to pay any tax imposed by section 602 shall procure and keep posted a certificate of registry in accordance with regulations to be prescribed by the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary. Any person who fails to register, or keep posted any certificate of registry in accordance with such regulations, shall be subject to a penalty of not more than $1,000 for each such offense.

Makes a Family Supply of Cough Remedy

Really better than ready-made cough syrup, and saves about $2. Easily and quickly prepared.

If you combined the curative properties of every known "ready-made" cough remedy, you probably could not get as much real curative power as there is in this simple home-made cough syrup, which is easily prepared in a few minutes.

Get from any druggist 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex, pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with syrup, using either plain granulated sugar syrup, clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, as desired. The result is a pint of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for three times the money. Tastes pleasant and never spoils.

This Pinex and Syrup preparation gets right at the cause of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the phlegm, stops the nasty throat tickle and has been used for throat membranes so gently and easily that it is really astonishing.

A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough and cold, relieve the asthmatic and bronchial asthma, there is nothing better. Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations to break severe coughs.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Expect Thousand
Teams to Bowl
in Natl. Meet

Toledo, O.—Teams from as far west as San Francisco, as far east as New Haven and as far north as Toronto will compete in the thirty-first annual bowling tournament of the American Bowling Congress, to be held here for 23 days, beginning Feb. 27. Among them will be two teams from Janesville, Wis.

Officials of the congress expect an entry list of 1,000 teams. Such a number would constitute a record. San Francisco has not been represented in a bowling tournament since 1907, but will send a five to Toledo. It will be made up of members of the city's lodge and will participate in the "Elks" tourney in Chicago preceding the international event here.

Prominent among the 1922 entries is the Saunders five of Toronto, which not only won the international five-man championship at Buffalo last spring, but which established a new world's record with a 3,995 three-game total.

New York's representation will consist of 23 teams. Denver is increasing the number of its teams to three. Other cities to have large delegations will be Detroit, Chicago, Buffalo, St. Louis, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Milwaukee, Cleveland, Port Wayne, Indianapolis and Toledo.

Entries will close Feb. 1, according to announcement by A. L. Langtry, Milwaukee, secretary of the congress.

Lampert Booms City for Tourney

Harold M. Lampert, Madison, prominent in bowling activities in Janesville last year when he resided here, is booming this city as the logical place for the 1923 tourney. As a member of the board of 21 directors, he is expected to wield an influence in favor of Janesville that will be more powerful than that of any one man outside the directorate.

Iowa Enthused for Track Meet

Town City, Ia.—Filled with the spirit of victory by the football team, and encouraged by the availability of nine record breaking athletes, officials in charge of athletics at the University of Iowa are optimistic over the possibility of a successful track team next spring.

For the first time in the history, the western conference outdoor track and field meet will be held in Iowa City under the auspices of the Hawk Eye institution. June 2 is the date for the preliminaries. The finals will be held on June 3.

According to Howard Jones, director of athletics, the "big ten" will hold a quarter-mile track one of the fastest in the middle west.

Movie Instruction

One of the new features in the training of athletes at the local institution this year will be the use of moving pictures for instruction purposes. A number of "slow" pictures will be taken and used to demonstrate to track candidates just how their arms and legs should move while running, pole vaulting and jumping. A projector has been fitted up in the equipment room of the athletic building.

Badgers Expect Clean Sweep on Basket Floor

Madison—Another step toward completion of the Camp Randall football stadium of the University of Wisconsin will be taken next spring, with construction of an additional section of concrete seats, and dressing quarters for all athletic teams. This will mean an additional 2,000 seats.

An expenditure of $30,000 has been authorized by the athletic council.

from funds earned through football contests this past year. Construction of new stands from this amount will involve the removal of the wooden grandstand which now serves as quarters for the various university teams.

When completed, the Wisconsin stadium will have cost approximately $500,000 and will seat nearly 50,000 persons, with training and dressing quarters for the athletes equal to any in the country.

T. E. Jones, director of athletics, expects that the stadium will be completed from football receipts within the next few years.

Dr. W. E. McManus has been coaching the men since the opening of school, and with two additions from the football team has the squad rounded into shape and the first string line-up practically decided.

Star Forward

Captain C. F. Caesar and W. A. Taylor, captain last year, are stationed in the "forward" positions. Both are in their third year of competition.

With Taylor at the head of the conference in scoring last season, Caesar has played for two seasons at center and guard, but fills in at forward like a veteran. He is a consistent player who seldom attempts to be spectacular.

Center again will be the weak point in the Wisconsin line-up. Johnson, a freshman player of last year, is filling in well. Gibson, another freshman of last year, is an aspirant who will probably alternate with Johnson, but without the aggressiveness and shooting ability.

Williams Great Player

Rallie Williams, Edgerton football star, is outstanding on the basketball floor. His work as running guard is spectacular. He is said to be unrivaled in the history of basketball at Wisconsin for his handling of the ball, and his pivoting.

John Williams at guard will either be Gustav Tebbel, end on the football team or R. J. Irish. Both men are experienced. Tebbel having played with the regulars last season.

Preliminary games are scheduled with strong teams before the opening of the season against Iowa on Jan. 7. The revised schedule of conference games follows:

Jan. 7—Wisconsin at Iowa.
Jan. 9—Wisconsin at Northwest.
Jan. 14—Michigan at Madison.
Jan. 21—Minnesota at Madison.
Feb. 4—Northwestern at Madison.
Feb. 10—Illinois at Madison.
Feb. 12—Iowa at Madison.
Feb. 18—Wisconsin at Michigan.
Feb. 27—Wisconsin at Illinois.
March 4—Wisconsin at Minnesota.
March 9—Chicago at Madison.
March 11—Wisconsin at Chicago.

San Diego, Cal.—Center college, crowned its football invasion of the west with success by splashing to a 38 to 0 victory over the University of Arizona here Monday. Rain fell throughout the game and the field was a mass of slime.

Center outlasted Arizona competitors. In the first half the Tucson Wildcats did not make a first down, and throughout the game they rarely had possession of the ball. In the third and fourth periods they made a few good gains but were unable to maintain a continued drive.

"Red" Roberts and "Bo" McMillin were the center stars.

Urbana, Ill.—Preparations for the 1922 annual University of Illinois relay carnival, to be held Mar. 4, are getting under way. Invitations have been sent to 250 colleges and universities.

The meet is one of the greatest indoor events for track. It brings together all the best track athletes from all sections. Last year 300 athletes representing 41 schools competed, and some excellent marks were established.

Southern colleges and universities are taking to the track much more over. It is expected that many of the "best" teams will send crack teams. Letters have been received from many sections asking for the list of events on the program.

Capt. Harry Gill, who originated this carnival six years ago, has written to the 21 coaches who were here with their teams last season, asking for suggestions concerning changes for the betterment of the meet, such as the addition of more special races.

The profits of the meet, as is the custom at the Illinois indoor event, will be pro-rated among the competing teams in proportion to the number of men competing and the distance traveled by the teams. This plan worked successfully in 1921.
